

Sonya Haines

I am a senior student at San Jose State University majoring in Radio/Television/and Film production and I am currently completing my minor in Photo Journalism. My career goal is to be a picture editor in a film or media production studio. I am expected to graduate in spring 2011. During my stay at San Jose State I have engaged myself in school activities some of which included the campus radio station 90.5 KSJS. At KSJS I was primarily an on-air operator but also involved myself in the production and promotions department. I designed and operated a weekly music broadcast program called "The Stockade" of which the content included metal and hardcore music as well as some other niche genres. I also attended station promotional and recruiting events some of which included movie premieres.

My radio show was on the air for 4 semesters including the summer and winter breaks in between. I recently finished working on a web mini-series entitled "Morning Assembly" led by faculty member Kimb Massey. For this project I led a team of 3 in coordinating props and set decorating. I also wrote an original script and created release forms for the talent and student staff. For the past 3 semesters I have been studying the Japanese language at San Jose State and I plan on continuing my language education outside of school. I also have some Spanish language skills. Some of my relevant coursework includes Broadcast Communication, Introduction to Radio & Television Production, KSJS Programming and Production, KSJS On-Air Operator, Television Production, Introduction to Film, Costume for the Performing Arts, Broadcast Performance and Spoken Word, Beginning/advanced Visual Journalism, and picture editing.
